

SELF - LOCKING HOOK

A self-locking hook is a type of lifting or rigging hook that is designed with a built-in locking mechanism to secure the load in place and prevent accidental release. These hooks are commonly used in various industrial applications to ensure the safety and stability of loads during lifting and material handling operations. Self-locking hooks are a crucial safety feature in rigging and lifting equipment